

LOOKS LIKE LUXE PRESENTS

The Luxe Gift Vault

Your holiday gift planner. For women with excellent taste, limited time, and a group chat that expects miracles.

HOLIDAY 2026 · RICH-GIRL TASTE, REAL-GIRL BUDGET

Darling, sit down.

I couldn't help but wonder: when did buying gifts for everyone you know become a full-time job with no benefits?

Somewhere between Halloween candy and the first Mariah Carey sighting, your brain goes blank. Your cart is full of nonsense. And your budget? Let's just say it left the chat.

So I made you this. The Luxe Gift Vault is where the list lives, the money behaves, and every gift gets bought before the panic sets in. Print it, fill it out with your prettiest pen, and tuck it somewhere dramatic.

Here's what's inside:

- | | |
|--|---|
| ☐ The Rules of Gifting (non-negotiable) | ☐ The countdown calendar |
| ☐ Your master budget | ☐ Wrapping and finishing touches |
| ☐ Gift lists by person | ☐ The thank-you hit list |

Dramatic? Yes. Helpful? Obviously. You're welcome.

xx, Looks Like Luxe

The Rules of Gifting

1. Decide the budget first.

Feelings are free. Gifts are not. Set the number before you open a single tab.

2. Shop for her, not for the algorithm.

A gift that makes her gasp beats three that make her say "oh, thanks."

3. The wow factor is mandatory.

If a grown woman wouldn't say "wait, they make THIS?", keep scrolling. No generic mugs. We have standards.

4. Buy the hard ones first.

Your brother, your mother-in-law, the coworker who "doesn't want anything." Handle them in October like the professional you are.

5. Check the shipping dates, always.

Cutoffs change every year. Look up your carriers' current deadlines, write them on the calendar page, and trust no one.

6. Presentation is half the gift.

A ribbon and a handwritten note make a $25 present look like it came from somewhere fancy.

7. Keep one spare gift in the closet.

For the surprise guest, the "oh no, we exchange?" coworker, and your own dignity.

Where to Start, Per Person

For the moments when your mind is a blank and your mother's birthday is Tuesday.

Mom. Something that says "you deserve a spa day" without the appointment. Silky, cozy, or deliciously scented.

The bestie. A little luxury she'd never buy herself. Bonus points if it photographs well.

The hostess. Anything that looks effortless on her table and is not a bottle of wine.

The teacher or coworker. Thoughtful, pretty, zero awkward. Think small luxuries for desks and mugs.

The little girl. One thing that makes the other children gasp. No crayons. We've discussed.

The man who says "I don't need anything." He does. Pick something he'd never ask for and will secretly use daily.

Yourself. Add one line to the budget for you. A gift list without a self-gift is a hostage situation.

DO NOT PANIC

The Countdown Calendar

Right now Set the budget. Make the list. Buy the hard ones (hello, in-laws).

Late October Order anything custom, monogrammed, or made to order. It takes longer than you think.

Early November Finish the big purchases. Start collecting wrapping supplies before everyone else does.

Thanksgiving week Watch for sales on gifts you've already chosen. Do not wander. Buy only what's on the list.

Early December Last call for gifts that ship far away. Check your carriers' current holiday cutoff dates and write them below.

Mid December Wrap everything. Write the cards. Pretend you are calm.

Week of the 25th Deliver, hand over, and accept the compliments. You earned them.

Shipping deadlines I confirmed

Wrap It Like You Mean It

A pretty ribbon turns a nice gift into a moment. Check these off as you go.

Supplies

- ☐ Wrapping paper (one pretty, one neutral)
- ☐ Ribbon, in gold if you can
- ☐ Gift tags and a good pen
- ☐ Tissue paper
- ☐ Tape (the invisible kind)
- ☐ Scissors that are not hidden by a child

The finishing touches

- ☐ A handwritten note on every gift
- ☐ A sprig or a bow on top
- ☐ Receipts tucked in (gift receipts, always)
- ☐ Photos before you hand them over
- ☐ A "to be opened first" gift for yourself

Notes for my cards

The Thank-You Hit List

Who gave you what, and who is getting a note by Friday. Gratitude is chic.
